William L. Self Preaching

An opportunity for Georgia CBF clergy to meet with Muslim leaders for dialogue and relationship building.

Given our world's tensions and the demands of the gospel to engage others in love, we are compelled to reach out in understanding—to seek the truth. Some churches have already begun this work by having dialogue dinners or building habitat houses together with mosques. The interfaith task force of CBF of Georgia hopes to spread this phenomenon and assist churches in seeking the truth and building meaningful bridges across religious lines. One of the first events that will mark this initiative is a clergy luncheon on Sept. 7th. Beyond that, this emphasis has far-reaching goals.

What is the face of Islam today?

We seek to help your church become connected to the Muslim community in your area so that you'll have a personal picture of what real Muslim faith and practice is all about. We hope to accomplish this by providing resources and strategies not only for learning the nuts and bolts of Islam, but also on how to build meaningful relationships with Muslims.

Won't you be my neighbor?

Let's go back to that classic line from Mr. Rogers—what better way to manifest the Gospel in today's diverse and changing world than to be a good neighbor, full of grace, full of love, extending a hand of friendship?

If you have questions or would like to register for the clergy lunch please contact Matt Rich (mrich@wieuca.org) or Michael McCuller (mmcculler@jcbc.org).

Tell your story!

Baptistnet (www.baptistnet.com) is looking for your church's summer stories. Stories of mission trips, children's or youth camps, special projects... anything your church is doing that might be of interest to other Baptists.

You can write your story or stories as short or as long as you wish (but we especially like the shorter stories).
Feel free to also send us photos or videos that help illustrate your story.

We'll post the best ones to Baptistnet's homepage so everyone can enjoy hearing how God is working within your church this summer.

All submissions must be through email, to this address:
info@baptistnet.com.

Go ahead, write it up and send it in!
