A Call of Patience and Faithfulness

The journey to pastoral ministry is unique to each individual. For Baptist women who have been called to pastor, the journey can be long and arduous, with direction and support coming from surprising sources.

Georgia CBF is home to four Baptist women pastors: Carolyn Hale Cubbedge of Memorial Baptist in Savannah, Wendy Joyner of Fellowship Baptist in Americus, Bonnie Decuir of Fellowship Baptist in Edison, and Denise Caldwell of Harbor Ministries in McCaysville.

“Often the time and distance between The Call and The Fulfillment for women in ministry is long and lonely. Just because God speaks clearly to women, and women respond faithfully to God’s voice, is no guarantee that doors will be open and women will be welcomed ... with a place of service that matches the call of God,” reflects Carolyn Hale Cubbedge.

When the CBF of Georgia office realized that Memorial was open to calling a woman pastor, Carolyn’s resume was hand-delivered to the search committee. “My journey took nine years from The Call through seminary, and finally to a church in 1999,” explains Cubbedge.

“As I sought the church where God would have me serve, I was often asked why I did not move to some denomination other than Baptist. I was pursued by Methodists and Disciples of Christ. Both denominations would have received my gifts. I chose instead to remain a Baptist because I believe the theology and I wanted to be around to help other women whom God was calling.”

Denise Caldwell remembers, “I thought I was safely headed into social ministry or education, music and youth ministry. As graduation from Midwestern Baptist Theological Seminary approached and resumes were sent, my eyes were opened to the trends of denominations that did not include women in certain ministry roles. I must admit I spent some precious time reflecting and grieving about the fate of women in ministry.”

From a resort ministry formed for the 1996 Olympics, a church was born, and Denise was hired as ministry coordinator. In December of 1996, she was ordained. Still not feeling called to pastoral ministry, Denise became co-pastor with Scott Raley. “As I began to feel more and more a call to preach, I argued with God. I remember saying, ‘God, I will speak when you want me to. I am already the co-pastor; why irritate religious leaders with being called pastor?’ This struggle went on for some time. The desire, the calling would not go away. (continued on page 3)

Frankly speaking

The members of First Baptist Gainesville did an excellent job hosting the spring meeting. A letter of appreciation has been sent to Dr. Coates, the staff, and membership for the tremendous effort given to the event. We are very grateful.

The move to our new office is almost complete. Our phones and computers are up and running. We still have a few things to do inside, such as hanging pictures and blinds. We will begin work on the outside in May. We need to replace the roof and do some painting.

Most of what we need has been purchased. We still need to order some chairs and tables and a couple of desks. A number of you have purchased a square foot in honor or memory of someone. If you have not done so I hope you will consider it. The purchase and renovation of the building will average about $40.00 a square foot.

At the spring meeting we approved a budget of $496,198.00. We also elected nine new members of the Coordinating Council. The Executive Committee will meet soon to fill vacancies on the Missions, Education, and Student Ministries committees.

The three committees function as task groups. They report to the Coordinating Council, and they supervise, in conjunction with the staff, the work we do. They also form subcommittees as needed. Our fellowship is growing and maturing, thanks in large measure to those who serve on these committees.

From Our Associate Coordinator for Congregational Life

I've been on the job almost four full months now. When family and friends ask me what I do, I have a hard time explaining it to them. I begin by saying, "Well, my title is Associate Coordinator for Congregational Life." After catching my breath, I then proceed to try to explain what that means.

The job description is a mile long. It covers Christian education, Sunday School, local church health, leadership and staff development, church music, family ministry, student ministry (children, youth, college), networks with staff ministers, networks with state and national organizations, and finally "other duties as assigned."

In an almost apologetic manner, the search committee said, "The job description is really just a starting place." Although they didn't want me to feel overwhelmed, I'm afraid it didn't work! If I approach it as a starting place, then I'm defeated before I get started.

As I've thought through the responsibilities of my job, I am more convinced the committee's description is not a starting place, but an ending place. It is a vision. It is what CBF of Georgia hopes to be about. With that in mind, I am able to approach the work before me with excitement and energy.

To that end, I look forward to strengthening the relationships I have with many of you across the state in our CBF churches. I also look forward to meeting many more of you as I travel, listening to your needs and the needs of your church.

Give me a call at the office or email me at dparnell@cbfga.org if you would like to work together on making your church a healthier place! I don't promise to have all the answers. What I promise is to understand your situation as best I can and help you envision the possibilities.

—Devita B. Parnell, Associate Coordinator for Congregational Life

"Feeling humbled, honored, and scared to death, I became the pastor of Harbor Baptist Church. I don't worry so much about what others think of me as a woman pastor. I don't have time to worry about it or dwell on rejection. Our little church has more important things to be doing!"

Wendy Joyner received support from an unexpected source when she became pastor of Fellowship Baptist in Americus. She received a call from a member of a neighboring Baptist congregation, former President Jimmy Carter. He invited her to his house in nearby Plains. "He was so gracious. He really just wanted me to know he was supportive of me," recalls Joyner.

Carter asked about her background and goals, and then said, "You can do weddings now, can't you?" She said yes, although she never had. "I did my first wedding through a referral from President Jimmy Carter," marvels Joyner.

The biggest influence in her pastoral ministry has been the Pastor Emeritus of her congregation, Frank Kirkland. Joyner explains, "He has been in ministry for over 50 years, and has taught me so much about what it means to be a pastor. I couldn't have gotten through those first years without a mentor like him."

Bonnie Decuir began her training for ministry thinking her calling was to hospital chaplaincy. "Pastoring a church was not on my radar during those first two years," says Decuir, "then I took my first course in preaching. To my great surprise, I loved it! I was startled at the visions of ministry that began to fill my mind."

During her final year at seminary, she sent hundreds of resumes to Baptist organizations and churches. In the midst of the process, someone asked if she would consider church positions other than pastor. "I had to think and pray hard about that," says Decuir. "I felt because God was calling me to serve as a church pastor, I could not consider something else, though it limited my possibilities. I knew if God wanted me to be a pastor, God already knew the church that was right for me."

One day Decuir received an email from Clarissa Strickland of the CBF national office inquiring if she would consider serving a church in rural Georgia. In early October 2002, she traveled to the Deep South to preach a trial sermon and immediately fell in love with the congregation. "Their openness to consider a brand-new pastor right out of seminary and their genuine concern for my welfare and adjustment to small town life made the decision easy," explains Decuir. "God had brought us together and an exciting new adventure was beginning."

memos from the missions coordinator

We are making progress in our initiative to begin "Touching Taliaferro with Love, Inc.," a corporation formed to do work in Taliaferro County. TTL Inc. is in partnership with CBF of Georgia and the Taliaferro County community. The first project planned for this partnership is the construction of a community center.

The organization is now a registered corporation in the state of Georgia and is awaiting approval of 501c3 status. We've had our first board meeting. We have a completed a boundary and topography survey, title search, and environmental phase 1 study. The appraisal is being done this month.

Gary Parker, our architect, has been with us as we met with parents and youth and let them share their ideas. Their ideas have helped us to see a greater vision, with the addition of a playground for children, ballfields, and places for families to gather. These ideas will be included in a site plan, which will give direction to the steps we take to realize this dream. The project will require time to develop and complete.

Plans are well underway for the June 16-27 Touching Taliaferro with Love Summer Day Camp and the first Baseball Camp in the county. Several supplies are needed to accomplish this first baseball camp. (See list at right.)

If you or a group in your church can provide these, please call the CBF office in Macon at 478-742-1191 ext. 21, or email tnelson@cbfgamissions.org and let us know. These can be shipped to the Macon office.

In addition, there are several opportunities for volunteers in other areas. Listed at right are the volunteers needed.

If you feel God can use your gifts to fill these needs, call Jimmy Lewis toll free at 1-866-245-5240 or email jblewis@mindspring.com.
